PLENTY OF ROOM FOR ALASKA AND HAWAII . . . There has been considerable speculation as to possible arrangements of the stars in Old Glory should Alaska or Hawaii or both be admitted to statehood. These girls at the office of the world's largest manufacturer of flags in New York City show two combinations of 50 stars flanking a flag with a field of 49. It—and when—Alaska and Hawaii are voted statehood, there will be a boom in the flag-making business, for existing U. S. flags will become obsolete.

PROPER METHODS OF HANDLING AND PLANTING TREES

April is Conservation month in Ohio, the week of April 10-14, Conservation Week in Ohio Schools and Friday, April 14, Arbor and Bird Day. The following instructions for Arbor Day planting are suggested by the Forestry Division of The Ohio Department of Natural Resources.

Dig a hole a little larger in size and depth than is necessary to take the root system when spread out as it would grow naturally.

Place tree in the hole, spreading out roots so that none are folded, bent or bunched. If running water is available, run a small stream into the hole and push soil in slowly so that it settles solidly around the roots. Hold the tree upright with the "root collar" level with the ground while filling the hole, and fill to the ground level. If water is not available, hold tree in position and push soil in slowly, tamping and packing firmly.

It is advisable to stake and tie trees which are in exposed positions until they are firmly established.

If trees are received a few days before planting, follow handling instructions in drawing above.

All trees should be planted at the same depth as they formerly grew. This depth can usually be determined by an "ear mark" or "root collar" on the stem.

Air spaces or pockets around a root indicate that it is not in contact with soil, which will kill that root, and possibly the tree.

Planted trees should be watered during dry periods during the first year or two.

INCIDENT IN RAYBURN

(A Short Story)

By RICHARD HILL WILKINSON

CURIOUS how the three of us turned out to be reporters. Al Leighton, Burt Turner and myself. Burt and I graduated the same year from the Rayburn High School. That was the year Al Leighton was released from the state reformatory. I saw him a couple of times during the summer, then in the fall I took a job with the Journal. Burt Turner had gone to New York. I heard later that he was in the game-making good on the Record.

Leighton at the time was doing feature stuff for the Ledger and I remembered being glad, because I knew it was what he wanted to do and he wasn't letting his record in the reformatory hold him back. It was in the fall of 1938 that I saw him. I was stationed at Tay-

We went up into the Shas country. I've never seen so many wretched people anywhere. Such misery and poverty. It made your blood run cold . . .

ch, an outpost near the Chinese front lines. We hadn't seen a white man for over a week, then one day Al Leighton came riding in on a burro as casual as you please.

"Hi, Eddie," he grinned. "Heard you were up here."

We worked together on a couple of stories. The war was taking a rest, but there were plenty of things to write about. We went up into the Shas country. I've never seen so many wretched people anywhere. Such misery and poverty. It made your blood run cold . . .

you to wondering why such men and women made the effort to stay alive. The gamut, hungry, predatory looks of those hillmen stayed with me for nights afterward. They sobered Al Leighton. Usually he was grinning. After that trip to Shas he didn't grin for a week.

"Remember Burt Turner?" Al said unexpectedly one day. "He's coming in. I just heard."

He was looking at me steadily, not grinning, his eyes lacking warmth. Curiously, for the first time, I remembered the incident back in Rayburn. I could see Burt Turner's young face, bitter and resentful because Leighton had been chosen captain of the football team. Later, triumph crowded out all the bitterness, all the hatred. Some money had been stolen from the school commissary and Burt had seen Al Leighton coming away from the place, hurrying, he claimed when telling the principal, with a furtiveness about his attitude.

I remembered reading years later that Leighton had cleared himself on that money charge, and I thought at the time that Burt Turner knew he wasn't guilty.

Leighton suddenly grinned. "If you're thinking about that time when we were kids, forget it. A man's different when he grows up."

Turner arrived two days later, a big, confident looking chap, prosperous, but easily recognizable. He greeted us both heartily, and Al Leighton shook hands with him and grinned his famous grin. It was a relief to see them friends once more, and the three of us had a gay time recapturing the merriest of our childhood. No mention was made of the money-stealing incident.

There was one thing different about Turner. He had a lot of gold in his teeth. Some of it you could see when he laughed. I remembered he'd had trouble with his teeth when he was a youngster.

The next day Burt said he wanted to have a look at the Shas country. We advised him not to, recounting our own experiences. But he was determined.

"It's cold up there," Al Leighton said. "If you go you'd better take my fur coat. And a gun. The hillmen don't love prosperous looking whites."

Turner couldn't very well refuse the loan of the coat, but he laughed at the idea of a gun.

He started out early the next morning, wearing Al's fur coat, carrying a camera, looking ludicrous astride one of those tiny, incredibly strong burros. We didn't see him again for a week. We scarcely recognized him. His face was mashed in a pulp. Why? After the hillmen killed him they had a hard job getting the gold out of his teeth. Cut him up considerably. Of course his fur coat was missing.

"Oh, I don't mind the loss of the coat," Leighton said. "He blew smoke at the ceiling. That fur coat and the gold in his teeth. Those hungry, ill-clad Shas men couldn't resist the combination. Especially when they discovered he wasn't armed. Turner always was a stubborn fool."

I looked at him sharply. His face was expressionless. But I couldn't help thinking of that incident back in Rayburn.

Beef Cattle

Tour April 20

Greene County's beef cattle tour will be held Thursday, April 20 leaving the parking lot in Xenia at 9:30 a. m. James Warner, beef cattle specialist of Ohio State university and a number of market representatives will accompany the tour discussing feeding, management, and marketing practices.

The tour will visit farms in Spring Valley, Sugar Creek and Xenia townships with both purebred and commercial breeding herds; and a number of feedlots, where different weights and quality of cattle are being fed.

The first forenoon stop will be at the Lawrence Beam farm, New Burlington pike. The tour will lunch at the Spring Valley high school cafeteria. The public is invited to attend the tour which is sponsored by the Greene county livestock council. The following committee is arranging and will be in charge of the tour: Paul Starford, A. A. Neff, Elden Heinz and Raymond Wolf.

Legume Pollination
 Meeting April 14
 The use of honey bees in the pollination of farm crops for production of seed and fruit will be discussed at a joint meeting of farmers and beekeepers at the court house assembly room Friday, April 14, at 8 p. m.

Charles A. Reese, extension specialist in beekeeping, and S. E. Bailey, state apiarist will be speakers.

With the reduction in wild pollinating insects, the honey bee is the most numerous of our flower visiting insect. Experts point out that beekeeping must be carried on to maintain a profitable agriculture; for without bees many species of plants will not set seed or produce fruit.

Feeding Choice Cattle Is Risky
 Cattleman attending farm and home week were told that they were taking a risk when they feed choice cattle for the market. The speaker was H. V. Major, head cattle buyer for Armour & company, who stated that the demand for choice cattle is restricted to restaurants, hotels and nightclubs.

Consumer demand is toward the good beef from young lightweight animals. It is only good sense that the farmer produce these type animals.

Profit In Feeding Whole Milk To "Vealers"
 There's a profitable way out for farmers with surplus milk supplies. Farmers can make a good profit by feeding enough whole milk to veal calves to make them weigh between 180 and 220 pounds before being marketed.

Dairymen report that 10 pounds of milk will put a pound of gain on veal calf. This means a larger income from milk than selling the milk and paying the hauling charges.

Before the war, farmers fed about 30 billion pounds of skim milk to livestock every year. A return to this method of marketing skim milk is good business at current pork and veal prices.

Report Stray Dogs On Sheep Farms
 Those frisky spring lambs can become a sorry sight if stray dogs are permitted to ravage the flock, and L. K. Bear, extension sheep specialist at Ohio State university suggests as the best solution to the dog problem is the elimination or control of stray dogs.

Ohio law requires that dogs be confined to the home premises between sunset and sunrise. If this is done and every farmer reports to the dog warden or other township official all observed strays, much progress can be made in reducing sheep losses.

Potash Shortage Affects Amount of Farm Fertilizer

Although the potash strike is over, it will be nip and tuck with farmers to get as much potash fertilizer as they will need in 1950.

Because of the long strike, no high potash fertilizers can be manufactured during the latter half of the manufacturing season.

All available potash will be used by the industry in mixed fertilizer and the amount will not be reduced more than necessary.

1010 Greene Countyans Get S.S. Benefits

Social security is pouring benefits into Greene county at the current rate of nearly $220,740 a year.

Frank Good, field representative of the Dayton office of the social security administration, said benefits for Greene county now approximate $18,395 monthly. These payments are being made to 1010 beneficiaries.

He broke these figures down to show $8,461 is being paid to 391 workers 65 years of age or over; $2,204 goes to 162 widows (also 65 or over); $3,152 to 263 children; $2,228 to 108 widows in their care; $1,303 to 82 widows 65 or over, and $47 to 4 dependent parents.

Mr. Good, who is at the Xenia post office every Monday at 12:30 p. m., pointed out again, however, that $1,059.53 was lost to 6 Greene countyans in the period from January 1 to March 31 this year. This loss occurred because the people did not realize they were eligible for benefits.

In order to prevent further benefits losses, Mr. Good gives two simple rules—when you are 65 years of age, get in touch with the social security office. When anyone in your family, who has ever worked under social security, dies—get in touch with the social security office.

In a more comprehensive report of the Dayton office's fourth show $369,230 being paid in the county scope, estimated figures entire area each month. These figures show $315,796 being paid in Montgomery county; $19,884 in Darke county; $18,395 in Greene county and $15,155 in Preble county.

Better Quality Hay—less waste!
 Electric mow curing
 CUTS WEATHER HAZARDS.

You can do a better feeding job with the greener, more appetizing hay produced by electric drying in the mow. Controlled drying with forced air from a motor-driven blower fan reduces weather hazards to a minimum. Handling is completed while the hay is tough and pliable, valuable leaves are retained. There is little chance of sun bleaching, hay cures with a fresh green color. High percentages of protein and carotene are retained every year regardless of weather.

Air ducts placed along the mow floor permit the forced air to circulate freely through the hay. This keeps the hay cool until thoroughly cured, doing away with the danger of spontaneous combustion, cause of so many barn fires. The same motor may be used to operate a hay hoist as well as the blowers for mow-curing.

For detailed information on electric hay finishing and the various timers and control equipment available, consult your County Agent, Vocational Agriculture teacher and the farm representative of your electric service company.

DAR ENTERTAINED AT CRESWELL HOME

"The American Indian" was the subject of a talk given by Miss Eleanor Kyle at a meeting of Cedar Cliff Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, at which Mrs. Frank Creswell, Xenia Avenue was hostess at her home Tuesday evening.

Miss Kyle, whose home is in Cedarville, although she is a member of the staff of the Dayton Public Library, described the American Indian and his habits. She illustrated her talk with pictures and maps, showing Indian reservations in the United States. This marked the first meeting of which newly-elected officers of the chapter assumed charge. Elected recently, they are Mrs. John Davis, regent; Mrs. J. A. Finney of Xenia, vice regent; Mrs. Robert W. MacGregor, secretary; Mrs. Warren Barber, treasurer; Mrs. I. C. Davis, registrar; Miss Eleanor Kyle, librarian; Miss Carrie Rife, historian, and Mrs. W. A. Condon, chaplain. Directors are Mrs. Anna O. Wilson, regent in 1949-50, and Mrs. O. Jay Burnett, Xenia.

At the business session, committee chairmen for the coming year were named by Mrs. Davis. Mrs. Creswell, assisted by Mrs. Robert Cotter and Miss Kyle.

Fayette county's new hospital will be dedicated May 4.

SOUTH AMERICA IS PROGRAM THEME

Two papers on South America were read by members at a meeting last Thursday of the Research club at which Mrs. Leon Kling was hostess at her home at Summerford, near London.

Mrs. Charles Duvall read a paper on "Friendly Nations of South America." A paper on "Music of South America" was presented by Mrs. Lloyd Confar, assisted by Miss Nancy Bost, music teacher at Cedarville college, who played South American music on the piano as the paper was read. Members named South American products as roll call responses. Mrs. Karl Bull, president, presided.

Four new members were received into the club. They are Mrs. Greer McCallister, Mrs. Thomas Harner, Mrs. Joseph Stokes and Miss Martha Cooley. A dessert course, with Easter appointments, were served by Mrs. Kling.

NOISE CAN DRIVE YOU TO INSANITY

SCIENCE HASN'T DISCOVERED

yet what kind of a noise bothers you.

But the experts know that noises irritate humans. The answer is: any noise at all, when there's enough of it.

Sometimes, of course, we are conscious of the noises that bother us, at other times we are not. But, says the scientist, whether we realize it or not, noise—most of it preventable—just isn't healthy.

Medical experiments show that noise where we work, where we live and sleep, and while we travel to and from work, can cut down our efficiency, impair our peace of mind, health and comfort. Noise, they say, brings loss of sleep, tired nerves and poor digestion.

The scientists have even devised ways of determining just how much noise, or how little, if you prefer, is damaging to our welfare. Measuring noise in degrees, called decibels, Dr. E. Lawrence Smith, neurologist, determined that noise at a level of 60 decibels or more had a decided effect in ruining digestions.

Decibels are easier to understand by comparison than by definition. For example, an ordinary conversation averages 40 decibels. Normal noise in a business office will combine to create a noise that measures 50 decibels. A noisy office often hits 70 decibels.

Contrary to popular belief, we never completely adjust our physical, mental or nervous mechanisms to noise. No matter how familiar a repeated sound becomes, it never passes unheard. Even when asleep, we "hear" sounds entering our bedrooms for they register on our minds and cause unnecessary mental activity.

Some sounds which experience has taught us require muscular reaction, automobile horns and the like, actually result in physical activity while we sleep. Impulses transmitted to and through the nerves by these sounds cause jumping, leg or arm movement and tossing, all adding up to an even sleep and less of real rest.

Occupational deafness is becoming more and more common. As our cities become noisier, there's more deafness, among road builders, bus and taxi drivers, printers and traffic policemen. Organizations of employers and insurance groups now are analyzing this hazard and beginning to develop control techniques.

Street and traffic noises are, for the most part, non-rhythmic, and therefore, the most annoying, as the ear cannot readily adjust to them. This gives rise to anger and other disturbing emotions. This is one of the reasons for the dire effects of noise on the delicately attuned nervous system. Not only does the continual pressure of strident sounds to which workers are exposed tend to produce impairment of hearing, but there also is a strain on the nervous system which leads to neurasthenia and other mental ills.

It has long been realized that noise in machinery means inefficiency. Automotive engineers particularly seem to understand this. The automobile manufacturers are quieting the modern automobile. Even the newer auto horns are less raucous, more melodious.

Other heartening advances in the battle against useless noise come from the use of more sound absorbing materials in factories, offices, stores and homes. Telephone and radio engineers have developed techniques which can show others how to cope with unwanted sound. Noise probably never will be eliminated completely, for paradoxically, absolute quiet has an adverse effect on human nerves. However, man-made rackets, industrial and especially traffic roars can be subdued to a point where they no longer constitute a health hazard.

Brain specialist Dr. Foster Kennedy has shown that noise has a definite and detrimental effect on the mind. In experiments at Bellevue Hospital in New York, he discovered that bursting a blown-up paper bag raised the pressure on the brain of a patient more than morphine and nitroglycerine, the two most powerful known drugs for increasing brain pressure. The paper bag experiment raised the brain pressure four times above normal for an interval of one second before returning to normal.

Is it any wonder that some people can be driven to despair, to insanity or to death by incessant noise?

At a recent anti-noise conference in England, Dr. Dan McKensie, British Army Surgeon, revealed that during the late war some men were killed by noise itself. The shock of anti-air waves, resulting from high explosives, was actually able to produce hearing. Scientists are studying the possibility of using sound waves, both audible and inaudible, as killing weapons for future wars. If the bomb doesn't get you, noise will.

All experts agree that a sudden, loud noise causes about the same reaction in a person as does a great fright. If the reaction is severe enough, it may be followed by shock, a general feeling of depression and a loss of vitality. And shock, from a medical standpoint, often is more dangerous than wounds and bodily injuries which produce shock.

Not only loud noises, but continuous noises even little ones, can create a great nervous strain in most persons. The Chinese, many centuries ago, used a constant noise like the ticking of a clock to drive prisoners, in otherwise quiet cells, out of their minds. Police officers recognize the psychological effectiveness of continual questioning and shouting which interrogating criminals and trying to force information or confessions from them.
